If this is the way fun's going to be, what's holding you back?

Anything that looks as good as Pontiac's all-new LeMans has just got to be worth looking into. And it is.

Check those lines. Simple. Solid. Almost unfair. Like Pontiac set out to rewrite the industry's styling manual. And made out.

But far be it from Pontiac to settle for style only. So you can choose from a 155-hp six with 3-speed stick on up to a 400-cuber with Turbo Hydra-matic, if you so order.

Whichever you choose, you get a list of standard goodies (like our hidden radio antenna and windshield wipers) only our catalog can do justice to.

Read it. At your Pontiac dealer's. While seated in a new LeMans. And you'll be ready for the fun of driving. The way it's going to be.

■ This is the week television starts trying to prove that it can do more for small children than merely keep them out of their parents' hair. This is the week Sesame Street begins.

Sesame Street is an experimental series of daily programs, on educational stations, that hopes to appeal to millions of 3- to 5-year-olds, that hopes to help prepare them for school and that hopes to have its biggest impact in deprived areas, where nursery schools are least available and most needed.

■ That's a lot of hoping. Sesame Street, however, has more than hopes and dreams and good intentions going for it. For one thing, it has $8,000,000, supplied by the U.S. Office of Education, the Ford Foundation and the Carnegie Corporation. It also has months of painstaking preparation behind it. And, perhaps most important of all, it has producers who know that before you can teach children, you must reach them—Sesame Street is designed to entertain first and ask questions later, to grab the youngsters' attention and not let go, by giving them a program they will enjoy.

But they won't enjoy it or benefit from it if they can't see it. And if they don't watch it—by the millions—we'll never know how effective a role television can play as a nursery-school-of-the-air.

■ We hardly ever tell our readers they ought to watch any specific program. We prefer to give them all the information they need to make a judgment, then let them make up their own minds about what they want to see. But Sesame Street is more than just another new TV show. We urge all parents of preschoolers to check our Monday Close-up to learn when and where the series will be shown in their areas; tune it in for the children; and, if possible, watch Sesame Street with them.

JOSEPH FINNIGAN REPORTS:

The SMOTHERS BROTHERS, bounced from CBS last season, are finding the welcome mat out at NBC. The Brothers are already set for a ROWAN and MARTIN NBC show and are expected to host their own special early next year . . . UNICEF, the United Nations children's organization, is making a TV documentary about DINAH SHORE's recent fund-raising trip to the Far East. It'll be offered to the networks . . . In between pratfalls, RED SKELTON sings on a segment of his series next January, a show featuring DUKE ELLINGTON and his music.

"Marciano," a memorial special on the late ROCKY MARCIANO's life, is being produced by Uplinger-Verna Sports Inc. for airing next spring. JIMMY DURANTE, DEBBIE REYNOLDS, JONATHAN WINTERS and CASSIUS CLAY appear in the documentary, which was written by BUDD SCHULBERG . . . ROD SERLING, creator of Twilight Zone, developer of The New People, and one of TV's most severe critics, now has sold NBC an original drama, "A Storm in Summer," which airs Feb. 6. It's the story of a small-town shop owner and an underprivileged boy from Harlem . . . MELVYN DOUGLAS plays BURT REYNOLDS' father in "The Return," a TV film being produced by CBS. PETER BROWN (Laredo), SUZANNE PLESSETTE and LARRY STORCH are also in it, the latter portraying an "evil bartender."

LEE MARVIN plans to narrate producer LEE MENDELSON's April 2 NBC special, "It Couldn't Be Done," a documentary on such great building projects as the Golden Gate Bridge . . . Academy Award-winner CLIFF ROBERTSON is in a Bracken's World, playing a cameo role--a little part played by a big star . . . Speaking of big stars, RUDY VALLEE guests in a Petticoat Junction episode titled "But I've Never Been in Erie, Pa." . . . PATTI PAGE makes her 25th appearance on ED SULLIVAN's show in January.

New Products Division: LESLEY WARREN, known as "Lesley Ann" when she played "Cinderella" a few seasons back, stars in Screen Gems' NBC pilot of Cat Ballou. It's based on the LEE MARVIN picture, and is a far cry from "Cinderella" . . . Paramount is pitching another pilot at NBC. It's We the People, based on the old radio and TV show. It tells the story of people with "offbeat or extraordinary experiences" . . . CONNIE STEVENS, a veteran of two TV series, is trying her luck again. She's playing a funny businesswoman in a pilot for ABC.

JOHN ASTIN shows up on Bonanza soon. He plays a man who is shanghaied to sea off the Ponderosa and takes seven years to return. Makes you wonder if he wanted to . . . KEENAN WYNN is out West too. He's on Lancer for an episode, as the sheriff who's a good gunfighter but a bad boozefighter.

Your mother is the worst reason to keep using the sanitary napkin you're using.

Remember that day you started menstruating? Your mother gave you one of her sanitary napkins. She told you how to wear it, when to change it. And that's about it. Isn't it?

Today, you're probably still using your mother's brand of napkin. And only because you're in the habit of buying it. Right?

There are big differences between sanitary napkins. Doesn't it make sense to know about them before you choose a brand?

For instance. Do you know if the plastic lining of your sanitary napkin covers all of the bottom—to protect you against accidents? Or only part of the bottom? Modess has a protective cradle of blue polyethylene that covers every inch of its bottom. And both sides, where accidents also happen. Nobody else has that.

And what's your sanitary napkin made of? Lots of paper and tissue may sound good. But it's not very good for absorbing moisture. Modess is made of special high-absorption material. They've also discovered a criss-cross system—that's been patented*—that distributes moisture throughout the entire napkin. So the napkin absorbs better. And you're protected from one-spot soak-through.

Does your napkin have embossed impressions on top? Oh, they're pretty. But they leave uncomfortable wetness near you. And that's not so pretty. The top layer of Modess doesn't have impressions. So the napkin absorbs faster. And you stay drier.

Think over these differences. We're sure, even your mother will agree, it's a more intelligent way to choose a sanitary napkin.

NASA goofed!

If only it had listened,
the first moon trip might have cost about $24,000, including the tin cans

By Isaac Asimov

NASA goofed, I tell you.

I watched the lunar landing on TV just as everyone else did. I saw an astronaut in a spaceship, walking on the moon, and looking just like an illustration for a science-fiction story of 30 years ago.

Naturally, my heart swelled with pride. After all, I myself had written some of those stories.

But then I thought of all that had gone before that wonderful landing. I thought of the way NASA had messed up all the preliminaries instead of doing it the way we science-fiction writers told them to. Oh, it just made me heartsick.

If they had only done it our way, it wouldn't have cost them 24-billion dollars. Twenty-four thousand, maybe.

Here's the way we used to describe the trip to the moon.

We used to start with a Dreamer. He was a scientist, rather scrawny, wearing glasses, and very, very earnest. He makes speeches at scientific gatherings and says, "We must reach the moon."

He's laughed at. All the scientists say, "There's vacuum between the Earth and the moon. Miles and miles of it. What would you breathe?"

He talks to newspaper reporters and they say, "But there's a vacuum between the Earth and the moon. What would your rocket blasts push against?"

He talks to congressmen and they say, "What's the moon?"

So he goes off, shrieking imprecations against the world, because he still has his Dream. Indomitable, persevering, endlessly resourceful, he decides to go to the moon anyway—on his own.

To do that, he builds a spaceship.

In his back yard.

Out of tin cans.

He picks up the fuel at the local gas station.

It takes him months.

Naturally, he doesn't take as long as NASA took. NASA went all through preliminary orbitings and space walks and dockings and rendezvous. That's all frippery; it's just astronautic boondoggling. Our hero's Dream is brave and direct. He isn't interested in having two ships couple in space. He just wants to go to the moon, and he intends to do it first try.

Once the spaceship is built, there is the question of a crew, and here NASA has been simply appallingly wrong.

NASA carefully selected the crew for uniformity, and that's terrible. No science-fiction writer would have dreamed of doing any such thing. You've got to have a little variety.

The astronauts we've been using have been wonderful men and I'm proud of them and I love every one of them, as we all do, but you can't tell them apart. Look at their names: Armstrong, Collins, Glenn, Carpenter—that's straight out of True Romances. Look at their faces: all keen, all incisive, all clean-cut, all handsome. Look at their characters: all noble, all intrepid, all boyishly modest, all winningly good-natured. They are all married, all family-men, all church-going.

No, no, no, we always advised wide differences to build interest and suspense. And we can't have just three, either. That's a silly number. The absolute minimum is four.

I'll prove it. Here's the crew:

No. 1: The Scientist. He's the fellow who built the spaceship, and of course he's going to be aboard. He's going to be captain, too, as is only reasonable. It's his spaceship, after all. He has a faintly foreign-sounding name like Duval or Johanssen because that makes him sound more like a scientist. He's the only one who knows how to work the controls. There are five of them. There's the rear rocket for full speed ahead and four side rockets for up, down, right and left. There isn't any forward rocket for slowing down because he doesn't intend to slow down.

No. 2: The Scientist's Daughter. →

All scientists have daughters. They are innocent and sweet and have names like Sally. NASA has never sent a woman into space, and that shows what jerks they are. Without a woman, who's going to scream at the approach of danger? Without a woman, who's going to gasp at the beauty of space and say, "The unimaginable depths of space are set with tiny lights, like infinitely small fireflies against black velvet, sending out their thin, luminous shafts that pierce our eyes like slender, darting arrows of flame." If you have just men on the spaceship, then what you'll get from them is, "Wow. Look at that. It's beautiful."

No. 3: The Scientist's Side-kick. Here we have the NASA-astronaut type, but only one of him, naturally. His name is something like Gallant J. Forthwright (the J is for Jack). He is large, muscular, clean-cut, incredibly brave, and terribly in love with the Scientist's daughter. He doesn't tell her that, of course, because that wouldn't be a clean-cut thing to do. His function is to be there in case of danger. The daughter is bound to get into a terrible fix. She'll fall down a ravine or trip over a mountain or get tangled in her oxygen tube (oh, she'll think of something). And then old G.J. Forthwright will rescue her.

No. 4: Comic Relief. Aha!!! Did NASA ever think of that? You bet not. He's a stowaway and he doesn't know about space. When he gets to be weightless, he's scared. When he looks out of the porthole at space, he's scared. When he realizes he's going to the moon, he's scared. This is very funny, of course. It's even funnier because he has a comical name like Jablonskiewicz, and what's funniest of all is that he has a Brooklyn accent. In the movie version of the story, that's a real scream.

Once the crew is on board, the ship takes off. Oh, not NASA fashion. NASA has it standing on its tail and then moving up very, very slowly. You get bored waiting.

In the old science-fiction stories, the spaceships took off like airplanes, from a start on their belly—the way God intended. And the spaceships went up fast: whoosh! We didn't have acceleration problems in those days.

Nor was it only in actual takeoff that time was saved, in comparison to the wasteful shenanigans of NASA.

You know how NASA does it. They spend hours (to say nothing of mental and emotional wear-and-tear) in firing this rocket and that, releasing this stage and the other, checking on trajectories, making midorbit corrections and who knows what else. This is nothing but climax-killing nonsense!

In the science fiction of the 1930s, our crew was involved with none of that. They just aimed the darn ship. What was so difficult? There's the moon right there in the sky. See it? Well, then, just steer for it. That's what our boys did, and they always made it!

Then, when NASA has the spaceship in the proper orbit, do you think they have the sense to do the right thing? Not at all. In an appalling example of mismanagement, they have nothing happen for days. The astronauts just coast along.

I guess NASA has never heard of meteors. In science fiction we always have meteors. Any spaceship heading for the moon always runs into lots of meteors.

None of them actually hit, of course, because spaceships aren't allowed to be hit, but what a chance for excitement! The scientist uses all his skill as he punches those five buttons and dodges the ship back and forth to avoid the meteors. His daughter screams with dutiful efficiency. Good old Forthwright knots his jaw muscles, and his knuckles go white as he grips the stanchions. (I'm not sure what a stanchion is, but it's supposed to be gripped so that the knuckles go white.) As for funny old Jablonskiewicz, he is comically frightened in Brooklynesse.

All this is called "character development."

And when the ship lands on the moon, do you think that all they do is plant a flag and gather some rocks? We know better than that!

Our boys find living creatures under the soil. Or else they find clear evidence of once-living creatures. Or else they find an artifact of some advanced civilization that once reached the moon. At least they find something.

And then, finally, the ship comes back. It's been away for weeks and in all that time no one has heard from it; no one even knows it left.

That's the whole point. The Earth hasn't had time and occasion to get bored with the whole thing; it hasn't been drowned by a trillion words.

The ship just comes back in a gigantic climax. The first that people learn about the voyage is the return. The crew gets out of the spaceship and the scientist announces, "We have just come back from the moon."

Naturally, the whole world believes them and goes wild with delight at this terrific and unexpected climax.

But it never happened. All the excitement was lost.

You know why? Television!

That's right, TV. We watched every step of the flight on television and it made NASA very self-conscious. The whole bunch went show-business. They had to fake all those controls in Houston and Cape Kennedy, and work up all those phony countdowns and make-believe midcourse corrections just so everyone could get into the act for the home-town papers.

And they fixed it so that we could even watch the landing. Just like it was in one's own living room. Dullsville!

It just isn't fair. We poor science-fiction writers were so busy working out all the details of the moon trip; how were we supposed to foresee TV? END

A medically sound treatment for most painful hemorrhoids

First, stop the pain. And the itching. Nupercainal® is a unique combination of lubricants plus the most effective topical pain reliever available without a prescription. It relieves pain and itching fast. Provides much longer lasting relief. Nupercainal also soothes inflamed tissue—in turn helps the natural healing process. Moreover Nupercainal facilitates natural movements.

Next, doctors recommend, use common sense. Stay off spicy, highly seasoned foods. Avoid constipation and what causes it. Such as lack of rest and bad eating habits. Stay regular. Sitz baths aid comfort and natural healing.

Above all, use caution. Nupercainal brings relief in most cases and for most types of hemorrhoids. But if symptoms are severe, persistent, frequently recurrent...if there is rectal bleeding...do see your doctor.

Night Lights

Leslie Uggams swings with her own show this season . . . and she radiates the kind of glow that calls for clothes with pure pow! Maybe even clothes that shimmer and shine, such as designer Leo Narducci's short pleated dress in ink-black acetate satin (left). The collar wraps like a scarf; the long pleated sleeves tie at the wrists. Narducci likes a giant silk paisley scarf with foot-long fringe with this dress. Dress $80. Scarf $60. Maxi raincoat (right), in midnight black, has the look and feel of soft, glazed leather (it's really rubber). Big shawl collar, double-breasted, body-hugging and forget the rain! $165. The hood that wraps Leslie's head is the collar of the dress on the far right. Long geometric print dress and tights are in a 4-ounce wool jersey—light as a feather. Dress and matching tights $145.

THE BATTLE AGAIN RAGES

The effects of sex and violence?
About the only thing authorities can agree on is how to spell the words

For several years the U.S. press has been filled with reports of the sexual and political rebellion of "youth"—and the consternation of their "elders." Some months ago, imbedded in these reports was the following UPI item:

President Nixon yesterday endorsed a one-year study to gauge the impact of the televised sex and violence on the Nation's youth.

In a letter to Chairman John O. Pastore (D-R.I.) of the Senate Communications Subcommittee, Mr. Nixon said, "I want you to know that I join you in supporting the proposed one-year study of the possible relationship between scenes of sex and violence on television and antisocial behavior among young people."

With this word of Presidential approval, the third major governmental investigation in two decades moved into action to examine the "sex and violence" being beamed by the TV networks at American children.

It is obvious, of course, that as it is generally used, the phrase "sex and violence" has to be short for "the wrong kind of sex and violence"—since the "elders" are not objecting to marriage, to police forces and to armies.

It is also a fact that the Surgeon General's task in seeking to ascertain the "impact" of TV plays on the human mind and conduct is scarcely simple.

The reason: every major ingredient of the problem—art, morality and human learning—is still scientifically classified as unconquered or subjective terrain.

As we reported last week, a TV play that is "true," "good" and "beautiful" to one American can be "false" and "vile" to another; and what is "right" behavior to one American is "wrong" to another.

As for learning, social scientist Eleanor Maccoby says, "We are nowhere near figuring out how to explore these learning issues yet. We hardly even know what questions to ask."

In sum, the object of the Surgeon

General's "one-year study"—the relationship of a series of unknowns—is a great frontier mystery so far as science is concerned.

The two previous full-scale Senatorial investigations—the Kefauver hearings in 1951 and the Dodd hearings in 1961-2, have already faced this dismal truth in spades. After summoning legions of moralists, sociologists and psychologists to discourse on the implications for children in the values of TV plays, both hearings ended under an avalanche of contradictions.

And both concluded with a helpless cry for more basic research in the realm of human consciousness.

There is every reason to suppose that the upcoming study by the Surgeon General's office will culminate in the same helpless cry.

There are several ways for the concerned citizen who lacks an elaborate scientific education to get a clear idea of what the Surgeon General is up against. The first is to understand the shoals on which the preceding Government investigations were wrecked—shoals which still exist today.

The Dodd hearings—to discuss only the most recent inquiry—were virtually a test-tube rehearsal for the current scene. They started in 1961, accompanied by strong warnings by the senator, who declared: "The outlook is grim. Something must be done. Sociologists, psychologists and other scientists have pointed out . . . that television programs saturated with crime, violence and brutality are dangerous to our children and youth . . ."

Strangely enough, when the principal sociologists and psychologists themselves testified, the "outlook" did not seem quite so "grim." In fact, it was not even clear if there was an "outlook" at all:

Dr. Ralph Garry, Boston University psychologist and consultant to the Dodd committee, and sociologist Peter Lejins, then member of the White House Juvenile Delinquency Commission, declared candidly that there was no evidence linking TV to juvenile violence. "It is impossible to the satisfaction of the true scientific method to prove a connection," said Lejins.

The collective ignorance of the social scientists on the subject at hand was summed up by sociologist Carl Perian, the senator's administrative assistant, in this way: "All fields of study involving human behavior are equally in the dark concerning the motives and drives that make men behave the way they do."

You might think, under these circumstances, that they all went home promptly, and saved the taxpayer some money. But they didn't. They settled down for several seasons of arguing—almost entirely about "violence," "sex" apparently proving too precarious a subject even to fight about.

And as the arguments unrolled about art, morality and learning—about one million words of them—they finally jelled into one discernibly basic debate. It was a highly academic debate—about the nature of plays and how the human mind grasps them—and, since this is the core debate of the current period, here is the net of it:

There were two schools of thought. One declared that plays must be analyzed in terms of an interlocking series of ideas or concepts. The other said plays must be analyzed in terms of a separate series of "stimuli" or perceptions.

What does this argument actually mean? Simply this:

Either: A play is what the chain-of-ideas people say it is—namely, a story about, let's say, a noble-hearted man who loves a virtuous girl whose puny inheritance is stolen by an evil old rancher. Thereupon, the hero gallops after the evil old rancher and gives him the clobbering of his life, returns the heritage to his girl, and lives with her happily ever after.

Or: A play is what the perceptual-stimuli people say it is—namely, a sequence of separate sensory ex- → periences, of which the critical one is the big clobbering scene, which consists of wham! and pow! and the sight of a fist on a jaw, and a body flying through the air, and a crunch and BLAM!

Why does this argument matter enough to fight about it, off and on, for two years at a Senatorial hearing?

Because, depending on these interpretations, both schools of thought draw different conclusions about the effects of plays on children. To wit:

—The chain-of-ideas people insist that children understand TV plots and can thereby learn the valuable old moral lesson: crime does not pay.

—The perceptual-stimuli people insist that such scenes of clobbering serve as stimuli which may "trigger" the children to clobber others.

'144 murders, 143 attempted murders, 52 justified killings, 14 cases of drugging, 12 jail breaks ...'

Needless to say, when the two schools confront each other, communication is less than ideal. At the Dodd hearings, perceptual-stimulus advocates served as witnesses and consultants to the Senatorial investigating committee, and challenged the chain-of-ideas men—writers and executives in the TV industry—to a series of battles, all revolving around this issue.

Thus, at the hearings, such testimony as the following was given by Mrs. Clara Logan, president of the National Association for Better Radio and Television, who had counted patches of "violent stimuli" for a single week in November 1960:

We witnessed the following: 144 murders, 143 attempted murders, 52 justified killings, 14 cases of drugging, 12 jail breaks, 36 robberies, 6 thefts, 13 kidnappings, 6 burglaries, 7 cases of tor- ture, 6 extortion cases, 5 blackmails, 11 planned murders, 4 attempted lynchings, 1 massacre scene with hundreds killed.

The chain-of-ideas men, denying the validity of this approach to plays, fought back with irony—hurling even more horrible "violence" statistics at the committee, taken from great literature, such as Shakespeare's plays.

Again, perceptual-stimuli advocates backed chain-of-ideas men into a corner, and tried to make them account for every bit of "violence" in specific TV plays. Thus sociologist Carl Perian "debated" the recalcitrant Grace Johnsen, ABC-TV's continuity acceptance director, as follows:

PERIAN: Mrs. Johnsen, I am referring now to the actual sound effects of the crunch, when the fellow stepped on his hand in the immediate scene that followed with his heel.

MRS. JOHNSEN: Crunch?

PERIAN: Yes . . .

MRS. JOHNSEN: I'm afraid I missed that, Mr. Perian. I don't think there was a crunch. . . . There was the commotion of what was going on in the room.

PERIAN: I think there was a rather loud sound effect.

MRS. JOHNSEN: Well, the acoustics aren't too good here. I may have missed this point.

PERIAN: We have seen the film several times, and I think there was a rather loud sound, and if you did not hear it, naturally, you cannot comment on it. Now you did hear the retching of the villain at the point where he had consumed too much water, did you not?

MRS. JOHNSEN: I don't think he was retching.

PERIAN: I see. Thank you.

Then the futile clashes transferred themselves to the direct arena of children's consciousness.

The perceptual-stimulus advocates claimed that many children up to the age of 13, and many adults as well, were completely incapable of following the television storylines. Thus Dr. Ralph Garry quizzed producer Richard Lewis of Revue Studios as to whether he thought adults grasped the connection between the "middle" of a Western and the "end." Mr. Lewis, a chain-of-ideas man, said he thought normal adults, and 13-year-olds as well, did understand the connection between the beginning, middle and end of a play. The argument deadlocked.

Again, Dr. Garry informed William T. Orr, vice president of Warners, that 8-year-olds could not understand the plots of Cheyenne, or their moral ideas. Mr. Orr challenged this:

MR. ORR: Do they understand good from bad or right from wrong?

DR. GARRY: They are still in the process of learning it.

MR. ORR: The reason I ask the question is that the Western is a simple form. The white is usually pretty white and the black is pretty black. . . . I believe children, even children under 6, can understand a simple story of who is right and who is wrong . . .

Indeed, the entire Dodd hearings were nothing but one vast deadlock over this central issue of children's comprehension, which was chewed over and over again in a variety of forms.

The hearings ended on a controversial high point. They presented a report on a laboratory experiment by a perceptual-stimulus psychologist, Dr. Albert Bandura. Dr. Bandura had exposed children to an unbroken patch of "aggression"—an analogy to "TV violence"—and his report caused astonishment in the chain-of-ideas ranks.

Specifically, Dr. Bandura had filmed a lady who took a mallet and, for eight minutes, pounded a huge rubber "Bobo" doll—the kind that bounces back when you smack it—shouting such things as "Pow!" and "Sockeroo!"

He showed the film to a group of 3- to 5-year-olds. The children were then given a small selection of toys, including a mallet and a huge "Bobo" doll. Most of the children imitatively pounded the "Bobo" doll with the → mallet, and shouted "Pow!" and "Sockeroo!"—but also played with the other toys.

'Dr. Bandura claimed . . . perception of "aggression" caused children to "learn aggressive behavior."

A control group of children who had not seen that film were given the same choice. They played with the other toys more, pounded "Bobo" less, and did not shout "Pow!" or "Sockeroo!"

Dr. Bandura claimed his experiment showed that the perception of "aggression" caused children to "learn aggressive behavior."

Many sympathizers with the perceptual-stimulus school agreed with Dr. Bandura's conclusions; Senator Dodd found his experiment "impressive." But advocates of the chain-of-ideas school were unimpressed. A snappish exchange took place between the senator and ABC's then vice president in charge of programming, Oliver Treyz, who declared that his network would not air "a lady pummeling a 5-foot doll for 10 consecutive minutes" and denied that this was "analogous to what is shown on TV."

Even some prominent social scientists were unimpressed. Sociologist Wilbur Schramm said he did not believe that the vast majority of normal children could be "triggered" to aggression in this manner.

"Television by itself cannot make a normal, well-adjusted child into a delinquent. This is almost the unanimous conclusion of research and clinical investigation," he said, and he concluded that only an already "psychopathic" child could be so "triggered" to violence.

And thus Senator Dodd closed his hearings on an anticlimactic note. On March 19, 1962, he wrote a letter to the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare suggesting that HEW write to universities across the country requesting suggestions for research in the vacuum areas of human learning: perception, concept formation, comprehension, value formation, and the cumulative effect of television viewing.

100% BLENDED SCOTCH WHISKY EIGHTY PROOF
IMPORTED BY INVER HOUSE DISTILLERS' LTD., PHILA.

TV GUIDE NOVEMBER 8, 1969

And that was the inconclusive end of the Dodd hearings—very much like the end of the Kefauver hearings a decade before.

So now, here we are, only seven years later. The functions of the human mind are still a major mystery to science. Art and moral values are still areas of violent subjective controversy. And yet a new study has been launched.

Why does the Surgeon General think there is anything to be gained from another go round on the subject?

Many reasons. But one stands out strikingly: in the last few years, Dr. Albert Bandura's "Bobo" doll experiment has generated a whole little "school" of such experiments, and the scientists involved all claim that they have proved Dr. Bandura's thesis—that the perception of "violent" stimuli causes "aggression" in viewers.

These developments have been publicized in the scientific press and are the premise of the brief report of the National Commission on Violence. They are the subject of intense controversy today—a complicated replica of the controversies described in this article.

These new experiments are expected to be an important element in the Surgeon General's considerations.

For years psychologists claimed that violence on TV could trigger only psychopathic people to perform criminal violence themselves. Then came the Bandura theory that seemed to challenge that. But does it really? Can TV trigger normal people to violence? Learn how science has been trying to find the answer to that and similar mysteries in next week's article.

What makes so many quarterbacks yellow?

It isn't fear of a pass-rush.

It's your color TV set.

It turns their faces yellow. Or green. Or purple.

Unless you're watching on a new Magnavox with Total Automatic Color.

TAC keeps the color right all the time, automatically. Even when you switch from channel to channel. Or when the scene changes. TAC also keeps the picture perfectly tuned, automatically.

No more jumping up and down to adjust the color right in the middle of an exciting end run. Now, with new Magnavox Total Automatic Color, you just set it and forget it.

And one more thing. The new Magnavox picture is a lot brighter, too.

So this weekend, watch your favorite quarterbacks in action on a new Magnavox with TAC.

They may be running scared. But they'll never look yellow.

CBS Will Drop Uggams, Shift Campbell and Revive 'Hee Haw'

It's all over, come January, for Leslie Uggams' Sunday-night variety hour. According to reliable sources, CBS feels it has no alternative: the show not only has failed to pull a passing grade in the ratings, but it is felt to be hurting Mission: Impossible, which follows it, by providing too little audience lead-in. Glen Campbell's musical hour will replace the Uggams show in the old Smothers Brothers spot (ironically, his show was born in their production shop) and his present Wednesday-evening hour will go to Hee Haw, the bucolic Laugh-In that clicked last summer. Otherwise, CBS expects to make only one other midseason shift: The Good Guys will be replaced by a comedy starring Tim Conway (formerly of McHale's Navy) as a small-time airport operator.

ABC and NBC still are weighing their midseason options. NBC hopes it won't have to dump any of its fall shows. At ABC, it's a question of how many promising replacements can be whipped into shape in time. For certain, so far: only a Johnny Cash hour, although at press time a 30-minute Pat Paulsen comedy revue seemed a strong possibility.

Is old reliable Gunsmoke a tortoise that's overtaking that go-go hare, Laugh-In? A veteran ratings-watcher, CBS program chief Mike Dann, thinks so. For proof, he cites an Oct. 13-19 Nielsen survey showing the last half hour of Gunsmoke, which overlaps Laugh-In, outpulling the Rowan-and-Martin shebang. Indeed, NBC's own horse operas are still doing all right compared with go-go fare: Both Bonanza and The Virginian outrated Frank Sinatra Jr.'s CBS special.

ABC will buck such TV favorites as Laugh-In and Gunsmoke next fall with Monday-night football games. But what will the network do to fill the time after the end of the 14-week professional football season? One natural idea now being explored: NBA basketball games.

Cable-TV is another step down the path to becoming an entertainer in its own right. The Federal Communications Commission has ruled that CATV systems with more than 3500 subscribers not only may, but must originate programming "to a significant extent" as of Jan. 1, 1971. The FCC also gave cablemasters the right to sell and run commercials within "natural breaks" in programs. Even more significantly, perhaps, the Federal agency indicated it hoped CATV operators will form networks of their own.

NBC may revive the fondly remembered Wide Wide World series of the 1950s. NBC News president Reuven Frank is dispatching Robert (Shad) Northshield, former Huntley-Brinkley Report producer, on a global swing to look into possibilities. This time, of course, with satellites available, WWW would be truly world-wide. In the days of the Dave Garroway-hosted original series, it really was wide wide U.S.

'MISSION'S' MISERIES

I have been wondering what was behind the Mission: Impossible feud with the Landaus, and your Oct. 18 article "Is This Mission Possible?" has helped explain it. It is my opinion that Mission: Impossible will have a short, unhappy life without Barbara and Martin.

Ida Wilkes
Fort Bragg, Cal.

Douglas Cramer of Paramount is really making the mission impossible with his theories that Leonard Nimoy could possibly replace that versatile Martin Landau and that anyone could ever replace Barbara Bain (especially Dina Merrill). I have continued to give the series my full attention in hopes that it is true that "the audience buys the show itself, rather than those who populate it," but something essential has gone ....

Mrs. B. Rivas
San Francisco

Mission: Impossible. Summary: no cinnamon, no spice.

R.G. Forbes
Towson, Md.

It is obvious that your Richard Warren Lewis believes in cutting on the bias. Choosing the side of the beautiful Miss Barbara Bain and the talented Mr. Martin Landau is understandable but hardly objective. I've known and worked with Doug Cramer for years, having developed both the calamity known as Custer and the more successful Lancer under his direction. His work carries the responsibility of delivering a product at an agreed-upon price, and he has no one to shift the blame to. He is invariably considerate of others, but being the man with whom the buck-passing stops, he's never given credit for being human or decent; this is a common Hollywood failing. I'm not working with Doug now, and have nothing pending, so I have no ax to grind. But it's difficult to remain quiet when a nice guy is slapped in the mouth for doing his job to the best of his ability.

GRIDIRON CRITIC GRILLED

Mr. Josh Greenfeld's inept analysis of pro football ["Why Do We Love Pro Football?" Oct. 18] is best explained by his qualifications: novelist, playwright and critic. Perhaps next week we will be treated to an in-depth analysis of professional hockey by Judith Crist.

Richard Bayes
Adrian, Mich.

ABSOLUTELY

When you add two and two, either the answer is four or you are wrong. There are no such absolutes about criticism. I happened to like Milton Berle's Friars Club "Roast" very much, but that does not mean that it was good. Scott McDonough ["Second Look," Oct. 18] found it boring, but that does not mean that it was bad. I wish that critics would cease pretending that their personal predilections are absolutes.

Geoffrey Bolton
Shirley, Mass.

JUST KIDDING?

The Oct. 18 "Doan Report" quotes Mike Dann as saying, "... Just wait! I'll next month when the Maxwell Smarts have triplets." I thought the Smarts were going to have twins. "A little 86 and a little 99," as CBS West Coast programming chief Perry Lafferty says in your July 26 issue. Which is it?

It's another one-movie week as far as the six feature-film network offerings are concerned, and beyond the one theatrical film your best bet may lie with a tailored-for-television movie.

"The Spy Who Came In from the Cold" is, of course, the granddaddy of all the disillusioned-spy stories. This 1965 faithful but elliptical version of John Le Carre's thriller provides Richard Burton with his best post-"Cleopatra" role to date as the protagonist in this ultimate antiromantic statement on espionage and on the total amorality and brute ethic of the undercover cold war. Director Martin Ritt has fashioned a moody and desolate film to match his hero and gives us a stark and embittered portrait of a frozenly perfidious world.

The remaining feature films are comparatively trivial. For adventure, "The Pink Jungle" offers us a banana republic that seems to be inhabited by wooden Indians resembling James Garner and Eva Renzi, with George Kennedy providing the only spark of on-screen life. "Rage," filmed in Mexico with Glenn Ford and Stella Stevens the only Americans, is a sweaty melodrama about a shady lady and an embittered doctor whose lust for life is renewed when he contracts rabies.

For comedy, "Boy, Did I Get a Wrong Number!" proves that even Bob Hope can get a wrong movie; it's for fans of Phyllis Diller's coiffure. And "Penelope," the week's one rerun, is for devotees of antique jokes who think kleptomania's a gas. Actually, the big howl of the week is "Mister Buddwing," a supposedly serious drama about an amnesiac that turns out to be an unintentional exercise in high camp and a cliché-collector's gold mine. This is the 1966 movie wherein people say things like "There's a name for a woman like you" and "Life's the biggest crap game going" with perfectly straight faces—but then again, Garner has one of the perfectly straightest faces in the business.

Comparatively World Premiere's tailored-for-television "Night Gallery" offers possibilities sight unseen. A trilogy of suspense stories by Rod Serling, the master thereof, its tales of graveyards, ghouls and terror have Joan Crawford, Roddy McDowall and Richard Kiley in starring roles, with Ossie Davis, Sam Jaffe, Barry Sullivan and other dependables on hand.

The week's unpreviewed minimovie is "The Spy Killer," involving a secret agent turned private eye. Its stars are Robert Horton, Sebastian Cabot and Jill St. John, that sweetheart of the tailored-for-television.

Jacques Cousteau 'The Desert Whales' 'Juilliard Comes to Lincoln Center'

An eyeful for armchair adventurers and an earful for music lovers made for a notable week of specials. ABC's belated first entry in the specials sweepstakes was a stunning episode in The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau—"The Desert Whales." And CBS's live telecast of "Juilliard Comes to Lincoln Center: A Dedication Concert" proved that classical music suits the "cool medium" quite nicely, even in nonprime time.

Dedication ceremonies often deliver the doldrums, and this one had its share of exasperating moments. Marking the formal opening of the new Juilliard Building, which completes Lincoln Center, the program at times bogged down in torturous speeches and pompous interludes with an ill-at-ease Leonard Bernstein. And a celebrity-hungry camera missed few opportunities to zoom into the audience and assure us that everybody who is anybody was there.

But the concert itself was a rounded one that included works by Liszt, Paganini, Mozart, Donizetti and Wagner. The performers—Van Cliburn, mezzo-soprano Shirley Verrett and violinist Itzhak Perlman (all Juilliard graduates)—were splendid, and so was guest conductor Leopold Stokowski. Unfortunately, the program ran longer than its allotted 90 minutes, so viewers missed the final offering as Ravel gave way to Lassie. There hasn't been such a shocking network copout since "Heidi" wiped out the Jets.

Shocking, too, was Jacques Cousteau's "The Desert Whales" in its brief views of the butchery that reduced the gray whale population from 50,000 to 8000 in a little more than a century. But today, the program pointed out, the gray whale faces a different and more insidious threat. Pollution of the species' breeding grounds may render extinct "one of the most majestic creatures ever to have evolved since life began." But the program was no polemic, and this warning was veiled in an hour's diversion that was bracing, beautifully photographed (above water as well as below), and strangely moving entertainment.

Captain Cousteau and the crew of the Calypso followed the 5000-mile migration of gray whales from the Arctic to their breeding grounds in Baja, Cal. Viewers were shown 35-ton whales mating, a diver riding a whale's back, mother whales and their calves (one calf became confused and decided that its mother was really one of Cousteau's research vessels), and divers rescuing a distressed but ungrateful pelican. Most memorable was the attempt to save a 3000-pound baby whale that had become stranded ashore: the Calypso became a first-aid station and its crew the foster parents of the helpless creature.

During the program, Cousteau said: "To touch life is to know it—and to know life is to love it." The death of the baby whale, and the sight of the aquanauts bidding it adieu, climaxed a program that quietly evoked an awe for life. Few TV shows—"special" or otherwise—can claim such a distinction.

Stanford meets Washington at Seattle in a Pacific Eight game. Stanford . . . Offense: led by the aerial magic of Jim Plunkett, Stanford can erupt (63 points vs. San Jose State). The well-balanced receiving is led by tight end Bob Moore, and wide receiver Jack Lasater. Defense: adequate (better against running than passing). Leaders include linebackers Don Parish and Pat Preston. Washington . . . Offense: pity the Huskies. They've got a husky line, it's true, but the backfield is very average and points hard to come by. Defense: improving—but it has a long way to go. Two good men are end Lee Brock and tackle Rick Sharp. Keith Jackson and Lee Grosscup report. For rosters, see page A-9. (Live)

IF YOU USE A DENTURE ADHESIVE, YOU SHOULD HAVE YOUR STOMACH EXAMINED.

Have you ever noticed that when you remove your denture, much if not most of the adhesive is no longer there? Guess where it has gone. That's right. Into your digestive system.

This is why we developed EZO. EZO is a soft disposable cushion. It holds your dentures in place firmly and comfortably through a unique patented principle. Most important, EZO remains where you put it. On your denture. That's why it continues to work . . . day after day . . . as a temporary aid in holding dentures in place.

We promise you that no adhesive you can buy will hold your dentures as securely, as comfortably as EZO denture cushions.

NIGHT GALLERY

Rod Serling wrote and introduces three supernatural tales bearing his distinctive stamp: eerie plots and chilling denouements.

- A despicable young man (Roddy McDowall) murders his uncle, then suffers a strange haunting. A painting of the family cemetery mysteriously changes to depict the fate awaiting the murderer. Portifoy: Ossie Davis. Hendricks: George Macready. Carson: Barry Atwater. Gibbons: Tom Basham. Doctor: Richard Hale.

- Wealthy Miss Menlo (Joan Crawford), blind since birth, finds a poor sucker beset with gambling debts—and buys his eyes. If the operation succeeds, the egomaniacal woman will have sight for 12 hours, and she intends to make every second count. Dr. Heatherton: Barry Sullivan. Resnick: Tom Bosley. Packer: Byron Morrow. Louis: Garry Goodrow.

- A fugitive Nazi (Richard Kiley) escapes from the horrors of his past with daily visits to a particular painting in a Buenos Aires museum. He is absorbed in viewing the picture when a concentration camp victim recognizes him—marking a new phase of his torment. Bleum: Sam Jaffe. Gretchen: Norma Crane. Agent: George Murdock.

A MAN AND A WOMAN

Plot takes a back seat to cinematography in this 1966 French drama, directed and sensitively photographed by Claude Lelouch. The movie won Oscars for Best Foreign Film and for its original screenplay, which Lelouch coauthored.

The story is a simple one: a widow and a widower meet while visiting their children at a boarding school. Gradually, they fall in love. But memories of the past threaten their chance for happiness.

Contributing to the film's intimacy is Francis Lai's score, composed around a motif that became a popular song.

THE SPY WHO CAME IN FROM THE COLD

Richard Burton won a 1965 Oscar nomination for his performance in this faithful adaptation of John Le Carre's Cold War spy novel. Screenwriters Paul Dehn and Guy Trosper have carefully avoided the customary James Bond heroics. Instead, the emphasis is on literate dialogue and the everyday routine of espionage.

British Intelligence hopes to outwit the brilliant East German chief of counterespionage. To infiltrate enemy territory, crack agent Alec Leamas is picked to play the defector.

Producer-director Martin Ritt ("Hud") deals capably with Leamas's character, stripping away romantic notions about the glamor of professional spying.

Cast . . . Leamas: Richard Burton. Nan: Claire Bloom. Fiedler: Oskar Werner. Mundt: Peter Van Eyck. Peters: Sam Wanamaker. Ashe: Michael Hordern.

Special: "The Heartmakers" examines the medical ethics of artificial heart research. Controversy arose last spring when Dr. Denton Cooley, chief of cardiovascular surgery at Houston's St. Luke's Hospital, inserted a plastic heart into a patient who subsequently died. Dr. Michael DeBakey, a pioneer in the field, claimed he developed the device and Cooley's use of it was unauthorized. Dr. Cooley insisted the device had been modified and was his to use. Critical questions provoked by the controversy include: when can a revolutionary device be judged safe for humans? Should a doctor make such a decision without consulting his peers? (60 min.)

SESAME STREET (C)

11:30, 5:30 6

11:30, 6:00 9

PREMIERE WEEK

Debut: "Sesame Street" opens its doors—and the ABCs and the 1-2-3s—to preschool scholars.

The series title, suggesting "open sesame," couldn't be more appropriate. The two-year experimental project was produced by the Children's Television Workshop and conceived, says executive director Joan Ganz Cooney, "to reach all preschool children, but particularly the disadvantaged. We want to teach them a number of basic skills and give them an increased awareness of themselves and the world."

Fast-paced daily fare, intended to make learning fun, features a potpourri of techniques (all tested by researchers): psychedelic cartoons; puppet goings-on, with Jim Henson's Muppets; songs, ranging from musical comedy to rock; stories and film shorts; and "commercials" that teach rather than sell.

Sesame Street is an anywhere-city street, and the people who live there (and host the show) are anywhere people: teachers Gordon and Bob (Matt Robinson and Bob McGrath); Gordon's wife Susan (Loretta Long); and candy-store owner Mr. Hooper (Will Lee). Celebrities, including Carol Burnett and James Earl Jones, also appear from time to time. (60 min.)

Take these colorful

BRIGHT and EARLY BOOKS

$1.65

(Pub. cat.
price
$5.85)

with your child's trial enrollment in
The Beginning Readers' Program

DR. SEUSS and his friends have done it again! Now they've created BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS that beguile even very little kids into reading!

Extra easy, breezy and gay, BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS make learning to read really child's play for 2-to-6-year-olds. They talk to a tot about things that are delightfully familiar to him: his eyes and the fun of seeing... his feet and the marvels they can perform... the ideas of "inside, outside and upside down" that a young child finds so fascinating.

But humor is the real magic of these enchanting new books. The big, cheery illustrations are so funny, a youngster can't resist them—and from there it's a natural step to reading the clever (but very simple) rhyming words and phrases. All it takes is a bit of "read aloud" help from you, and your youngster will be on his way. Slowly at first, then with more assurance, he'll be reading proudly all by himself!

From this happy start—on to bigger things!

The three BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS shown here are the starter books in the BEGINNING READERS' PROGRAM. They cost $5.85 at the publisher's catalog price. But you may have all three for only $1.65 as an introduction. They'll get your "beginning" beginner off to a happy start in reading. And then it's an easy glide right into reading regular BEGINNER BOOKS... for they begin where BRIGHT AND EARLY BOOKS leave off!

As a member of the program, your child will receive a BEGINNER BOOK each month, and you will be billed only $1.65 plus delivery instead of the publisher's catalog price of $1.95 (you save on every book). After accepting four monthly selections, you may cancel membership at any time.

Enjoy this 10-day treat FREE!

It's a delight to watch DR. SEUSS and his friends charm your child into reading. We'd like you to see how they do it for yourself. So you're invited to accept the three starter books shown here for a 10-day free trial. Then you must be truly enthusiastic about the books and, indeed, the whole program, or you may return the three introductory books and owe nothing. Just fill out and mail the attached coupon today or write to:

The EYE BOOK
by Theo. LeSieg*
illustrations by Roy McKie

A delightful book about eyes and what they see! It explains simple concepts in easy words and wonderfully whimsical pictures that will enchant any child who can turn a page.

The FOOT BOOK
by Dr. Seuss

Up feet, down feet, here come clown feet. Only Dr. Seuss, using simple rhymes and delightfully daffy drawings, could have created a book about funny feet like this for tots.

INSIDE OUTSIDE UPSIDE DOWN
by Stan and Jan Berenstain

Here are the famous Berenstain bears to tickle your little preschooler's funny bone. Simple words are combined with hilarious pictures to make your youngest child giggle with joy.

Florence, Italy, to detail the aftermath of the city's devastating 1966 flood, they intended to produce a tribute to the patience and courage of the Florentines. What they came away with is an expose of the Florentines' failure to adequately restore their city, especially its invaluable art treasures. The problems have always been there; the flood only magnified them . . . bureaucratic and citizen indifference; lack of money; commercial opportunism. Footage includes the Cimabue crucifix; a parade and soccer match in the city's Piazza Signoria; a group of restorators debating techniques; a communist party rally. Photography: Charles Stewart. Special: Harry Reasoner and Mike Wallace are the on-camera editors for tonight's issue of the CBS newsmagazine. Scheduled articles, which may be changed up to air date, are listed below.

THE TROUBLED PEOPLE OF ULSTER Datelines from Northern Ireland have been frequent during recent months, with reports on violent clashes between Protestants (constituting the majority) and Catholics. The Protestants, wishing to maintain the status quo, feel the threat of a Catholic revolution supported by the neighboring Irish Republic. Catholics in Northern Ireland, for their part, say they are being oppressed by religious, political and economic persecution. Charges and countercharges abound. For the human side of the story, correspondents Reasoner and Wallace went to Northern Ireland to talk with people on both sides of the barricades.

BIRDS, BEES AND BALLOTS Renton, Wash., has been rocked by a controversy over sex education in its public school system. Last spring, a pilot program was launched. It had been cleared with the right people—teachers, parents, religious leaders—but evidently not with all the right people. As the first community in Washington to institute sex education, Renton drew heavy flak. Harsh critics included MOTOREDE (Movement to Restore Decency, an ad hoc committee of the John Birch Society), the ultraconservative Christian Crusade and the Renton Parents for Responsible Education. Newsman Hughes Rudd reports on the conflict, starting with results of last Tuesday's school board elections, which hinged on the controversy. (60 min.)

HEY, HEY, HEY—IT'S FAT ALBERT

Special: Cosby and his childhood chums from North Philadelphia star in Bill's first animated TV special.

The Tackle Championship of the Entire World is at stake as Captain Cosby's Eagles prepare to meet the fearsome Green Street Terrors. With Fat Albert on their team, the Eagles are confident they can forgo practice for a matinee (featuring Lon Chaney Jr. as the Wolfman).

But without Fat Albert the Eagles are nothing. And at game time, Fat Albert is what they're without. Hurt by his teammates' wisecracks about his size, Big A says he'll sit this one out. Maybe even leave the neighborhood.

The cartoon figures move against a continuing film background of buildings, traffic—and pro footballers. Music by Herbie Hancock.

JOHNNY CARSON'S REPERTORY COMPANY

Special: Johnny steps from behind the desk to present an hour of breakup comedy featuring George C. Scott, Maureen Stapleton and Marian Mercer, who have appeared on "Tonight" with "The Mighty Carson Art Players."

"Streetcar on a Hot Tin Summer," a Tennessee Williams spoof, finds Fat Mama (Maureen), and her son and daughter-in-law (Johnny, Marian) desperately trying to find out who Fat Daddy (George) has named in his will.

"The First Annual Sleazy Film Awards." Emcee Bob Smith (Johnny) hands out the Sleazys, presented to the best X-rated films. Included are excerpts from some nominated films and an explanation of a new movie-rating system.

"Deputy John." Johnny plays the host of a Saturday morning kiddie show, who is suffering from a fierce hangover.

"The College Couple" announce they plan to live together. Taking the news badly are his parents (Johnny, Marian) and hers (George, Maureen).

Short bits: golfers Johnny and George bemoan the difficulty of keeping up with the game in the midst of business pressures . . . and the foursome attempts to offer a cantata.

NORMAN ROCKWELL'S AMERICA

Special: Jonathan Winters is the host for an hour of Americana laced with music and comedy, based on the paintings of Norman Rockwell, dean of American illustrators.

Rockwell's Saturday Evening Post scenes of American life form the basis for comedy vignettes featuring Winters, Michele Lee and Dick Smothers. In a setting that duplicates his Stockbridge, Mass., studio, Rockwell tells the story behind one of his best-known works, "The Four Freedoms."

In sketches, Jonathan plays a wily country doctor, a policeman chatting with a runaway boy and a lonely salesman talking to a secretary (Michele); Michele and Dick are a suburban couple living the commuter life; and Jonathan and Dick are gallery goers viewing a nude.

Produced and directed by Bob Henry. Music arranged and conducted by Eddie Karam.

Highlights . . . Michele, Dick: "The Honeymoon Is Over," "My Favorite Things." Jonathan: "Michele." Dick: "A Day in the Life of a Boy," "Turn Around." Michele: "Frank Mills." Baldwin Hills (Cal.) School Choir: "It's a Small World." (60 min.)

Now Possible To Shrink Hemorrhoids Stop Itching and Relieve Pain IN MOST CASES.

Science has found a medication with the ability, in most cases—to stop burning itch, relieve pain and actually shrink hemorrhoids. Tests by doctors proved in case after case, while gently relieving pain and itching, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

The answer is Preparation H®. There is no other formula like it for the treatment of hemorrhoids. Preparation H also soothes inflamed, irritated tissues and helps prevent further infection. In ointment or suppository form.

A tampon is used internally. It should be made with an understanding of female anatomy.

A CAREFREE* Tampon is made with this understanding. A gynecologist created its design.

Ten years of research resulted in a tiny tampon that blossoms out to prevent by-pass.

A Carefree Tampon expands radially, in width only, not in length like other tampons.

It's the modern tampon for modern women.

Note: Swedish women are world-famous for their advanced attitudes toward feminine hygiene.

In Sweden, over 90% of the women who use tampons use a tampon of the Carefree design.

Under the phosphorescent black light of a psychedelic painting, Andy Williams was quite a sight. His mod flower-print shirt glowed as he searched for words to explain some changes in his attitudes about life. "We just moved to a house on the beach and I'm getting rid of a lot of junk that's been in my head. I don't like some of the things I thought I liked. I don't particularly like that big Mediterranean house in Bel Air as much. I don't like my gallery-full of classical paintings as much. . . . I'm changing. . . . I'm much happier than I was a couple of years ago. I feel much more free. . . ."

The phosphorescent canvas seemed to shimmer with disbelief. Sensing the incongruity, Andy looked up at the wall of luminescent purple fuzz streaked with Day-Glo: "I'm different, all right, but I'm not ready for that. In a few years maybe we'll all think it's great. But right now it stinks!"

Andy's wife Claudine—who is a wonderful combination of Julie Andrews, Simone de Beauvoir and Little Annie Fanny—laughed with charming glee. An ex-Folies-Bergere dancer and singer, Claudine had been laughing almost continuously that summer morning, since the moment Andy discovered that she was nearly too big to fit in the front seat of their white Mercedes convertible, being only a few days from delivering the Williamses' third child, Robert Andrew. If there was ever any trouble in the Williams household—as the gossipists have had it for over a year now—you couldn't tell it that day.

We were lunching not in one of the posh Hollywood cateries of his past, but in a spot on the fringe of Los Angeles's hippie embankment, a small health-food restaurant, one of those places that serves alfalfa sprouts and attracts a happy, hirsute clientele.

The waiter, recognizing Andy as an old customer, delivers tall glasses of a green liquid which he explains is spinach juice spiked with pineapple. Andy is explaining that he digs the modern art scene more than ever. One of his new-found passions is the work of Jackson Pollack. "I sat for like two hours and watched that big Jackson Pollack painting in the Metropolitan in New York. I never realized how beautiful art could be. I got on this new kick about a year ago. I met a young guy named Nicholas Wilder at the gallery next door who really turned me on to art." Andy's offices at Barnaby Productions, which always did look like an art gallery, suddenly acquired a new crop of splashes and blotches of color leaping off sunlit white walls. There are two Picasso drawings in the men's room.

His art collection has been growing and changing for years, as has his taste in music, Andy explains. He has always been a bright guy with urbane interests. That mythology of the all-American know-nothing boy from Wall Lake, Iowa, was always a bum rap. And mention of that "image" still makes Andy bristle: "I don't know how that 'image' stuff got started. Maybe they figured I needed some jazzing up. When I started my own summer show in television in 1959, everyone was very concerned with what my 'image' was going to be. Not too sharp or hip.

Not too corny. All the producers could talk about was how they were going to make me successful. Rather than take me for what I was or what I could do, they kept saying, 'Don't wear too severe pants, get a natural-shoulder jacket, don't wear your hair too long, put on a sweater, and sit on a stool.' I became a little uncertain of what was really me."

Andy's identity problems began when, as the youngest of the Williams Brothers quartet, he was a well-scrubbed corncob grinning out from amid the group once described as "the male Andrews Sisters." Then, under the tutelage of Kay Thompson, who introduced him to the joys and disappointments of art collecting, he developed his native intelligence and gained a veneer of sophistication which (along with a physical resemblance) caused Steve Allen to call him a teen-age Noel Coward. As a summer replacement in 1959 he was Glen Campbell 10 years early; he was guilty of, one of the news magazines said, "creeping good-guyism." As he moved into the mid-Sixties, his public personality remained split like an adolescent schizophrenic: the polished, apple-pie performer and the shy, off-stage introvert.

Kay Thompson gives a key insight into Andy's youthful dual personality with her story of Melvin, Junior and Eloise. She recalls that when she was touring the country with Andy and his brothers in the late Forties, she got the idea for her book "Eloise" from the child games she and the Williamses used to play off-stage. She was Eloise, age 6, and each of the Williamses assumed a child personality—except Andy, who assumed two personalities: "Melvin, who was 3 and helped his mother shell peas, and Junior, who was 9 and wanted to go under the house all the time."

to the Williamsses' beach house in Malibu. Here Andy's relaxed life style presents an even sharper contrast to the old image. He is loquacious, witty, knowledgeable and eager to express opinions. Hedonistic, in the sun-loving sense, he is keenly self-analytical. He seems to take as much delight in playing barefooted with his children—Noelle, 6, and Christian, 4—as in discussing philosophy. As we sit on the sun deck through the afternoon, the conversation covers a broad area.

"Sadness is a healthy emotion because it is not selfish," Claudine suggests. It sounds profound in that ear-lobe-tingling French accent. "What about depression?" asked Andy. "Isn't that personal?" "Yes," she decides, "you are depressed always about something selfish, but you are sad about things outside yourself, larger than yourself." Andy thought, and nodded agreement. On this sunny afternoon, their rapport seems idyllic.

As we continue talking, a figure who has been wandering along the Malibu beach draws nearer to the house. With his rolled trousers, walking stick, tousled mane and unshaven countenance, he has to be some beach bum.

"Hi, Herb," says Claudine.

It is, indeed, the suave leader of the Tijuana Brass, Herb Alpert. "When will the tide bring more sand up on this beach, Herb?" asks Andy. Herb shrugs, pokes his walking stick in the sand and observes that the sunset will be spectacular. He declines a drink and, with a wave, trudges lazily off down the sand, just another beach-comber again.

Alpert fades to a faintly visible speck and conversation turns to Andy's new TV show.

"This year I'm going to do things that I like and stop worrying about 'image.' Audiences don't like the same show today that they would have liked two years ago. I want to be my contemporary self.

"One thing I especially like is that I'm performing to live audiences. I know I do a better show in Vegas than in most TV studios. NBC built a special sound stage which brings me into closer contact with audiences and we're able to shoot almost straight through without losing momentum or breaking the excitement. I'm trying to center everything on music, everything from Don Ho to Creedence Clearwater, and Blood, Sweat and Tears. Some say it's a youth-oriented show. I like to say it's a hip family show with something for all age groups."

(Marty Pasetta, director of the Williams show, puts it slightly differently: "We've already got all of Andy's regular fans, so if we can lure the younger kids with a rock act each week, we'll get a good chunk of the audience.")

This is the new, emancipated, "non-split" Andy Williams? "After one of last years' specials I got letters from older people saying we won't watch your show any more," Andy continues. "So what? We also received enthusiastic letters from kids. I like communicating with a lot of young people, because maybe they'll get the idea that there's somebody in the older group that isn't giving them a bunch of nonsense. I think I do some good, for example, on my annual Christmas show by showing that family life doesn't have to be corny."

If Williams does have any special credibility credit with youth, it may stem from the social and political stands he has taken in recent years. As a friend and strong supporter of the late Robert Kennedy, Andy shared many of the late senator's views. "Bob" was a dedicated man who believed in doing good for other people. The things he wanted to do in terms of social reform and civil rights are badly needed."

ing campaigns by cigarette companies.

If all else fails for Andy, there are always his recordings. According to a Columbia-records survey, the bulk of Williams's fans are under 30 and his albums are selling at the rate of 25,000 per week. They have carried him from "Moon River" to "Happy Heart" with a total of 13 gold records for albums selling more than 1,000,000 and have boosted his estimated corporate worth to $20,000,000, including a citrus farm in the San Joaquin Valley, shopping centers, apartment buildings, "... and lots of other stuff I've never seen," adds Andy.

"The investments are made for me, generally by my father. They just make money; but the business that I'm really interested in right now is Barnaby Productions, which is doing my television show, publishing my music and releasing records. I'm also interested in basketball since I invested in the Phoenix Suns. I didn't even know who Wilt Chamberlain was until I got involved with the team. And I started the Andy Williams San Diego Open golf tournament to help the Salk Institute. This year we raised over $100,000 and I really had fun doing it."

With this kind of affluence, why should he return to the rigors of weekly TV?

"I really like singing. I really like putting together a regular show. That's the way I get some of my kicks."

Leaving Malibu Beach, I was convinced that Andy is changing and he may yet find that elusive self lost up there on the TV screen. It is the theme for my recurring fantasy, in which two boys are knocking at the door of a Plaza Hotel suite. The door opens, revealing none other than that frightened half-pint, Eloise. "Can Andy come out to play?" singsong, Melvin, 3, and, Junior, 9, in concert.

"Really," says Eloise in her best hands-on-hips tone of exasperation, "I wish you boys would leave him alone. After all, he is 40 years old!" END

Inspire Your Skin To Greater Heights Of Beauty

A lovely skin has truly become a feminine joy since scientists uncovered the secrets of a rare tropical moist oil with a remarkable ability to help nature sustain the youthful splendor of the skin.

Today it is possible to use this unique moist oil to give the skin a "do-it-yourself" incentive to maintain the healthy productivity of balanced oil and moisture. These two vital elements are taken for granted while the skin is very young and nature bountifully provides her own moist oil fluids to keep the baby-softness and dewiness alive, but after the age of twenty the natural flow becomes less spontaneous. The maturing complexion suddenly finds itself in need of substitutionary fluids that will help stimulate the flagging cellular functions of the skin.

This is the time when the scientific moist oil comes into its own. Being isotonicly pressurized to balance successfully with natural fluids, this tropical fluid contributes to the inducement of the skin to rise to new heights of splendor. Its perfect blend of oil and moisture is homologous to the skin's own fluids, readily merging with existing reserves and helping to boost dwindling levels.

Smoothed over the face each day and used as a superb base for make-up, the beauty fluid promotes the stimulation and replenishment of the plasma colloids (dermal water-carriers) by hygroscopic attraction to the skin of moisture always present in the surrounding atmosphere.

This moist tropical oil is obtainable in most countries of the world and here in America is available from druggists as oil of Olay.

Beauty Skin-Care Consultants Recommend

To keep your lips soft and pretty, give them a generous quota of the beautifying moist oil when you do your face. This light film of oil of Olay will also act as a foundation for the smooth and lasting application of your lipstick.

The saga of the birth of 'Bracken's World'

By Dwight Whitney

We are in 20th Century-Fox Projection Room 4A on a hot summer afternoon, watching a rough-cut of Bracken's World, a new series about Hollywood. The episode concerns a kinky young actress named Susannah who lives like a hippie, reads tarot cards and is obsessed with the idea that she is the new Mia Farrow. When she fails to get the part she seeks, she sabotages the actress who does by putting LSD in her orange juice.

It appears, however, that this is not the troublesome thing about this particular segment. At one point Peter Haskell, who portrays the young producer, and Madlyn Rhue, cast as his wife, play a conjugal seduction scene in which she runs her hand inside her husband's open sport shirt. →

"I don't know about that chest shot," says George Lehr, the postproduction man, when the lights go up.

"Too bad if it had to come out," rejoins Grant Tinker who, in the absence of Fox TV-production chief William Self, speaks for management.

"I know Stanley's [Stanley Rubin, the producer] very high on it," says Lehr. "Maybe we trim a little bit."

"After all," says Tinker wearily, "they're married."

We have just been inadvertently confronted with a TV Fact of Life. Today, with Congress kicking up a fuss over "sex and violence," even "hard-hitting, realistic" stories of the sort Bracken's World purports to be, operate in the kind of emotional vacuum which deems sex inappropriate even in marriage.

To Bill Self, who spent seven years fighting to get the show on the air, the matter is of little consequence. He is a businessman; he knows, as nearly as any man can, what sells. The Now Generation to the contrary, he believes that large masses of people are still fascinated by the power plays, peccadilloes and personal tragedies of the movie-studio elite. In the end, he made the network believe it too. But not without a battle.

The battle began in the early Sixties, when Self was new to his job and Fox was far from the TV power it is today. He had always been struck, he says, with the resemblance between a movie studio and a small town, each a self-sufficient entity with its own police force, fire department, school, commissary and hospital. He visualized a kind of mink-bearing Peyton Place in which everybody wore Sulka ties over his dungarees. He asked Paul Monash (who later produced Peyton Place) to sketch out the idea in six pages. Monash came up with a story about, says Self, "a young Rod Taylor-type who ran the studio for an invisible boss."

The notion was hawked around the networks in 1962 and rejected as being "too inside." A prejudice has existed against backstage stories ever since Dick Powell and Ruby Keeler ran the genre into the ground with a series of Warner Bros. musicals back in the Thirties. Only three—"A Star Is Born," "Sunset Boulevard" and "The Bad and the Beautiful"—had ever really made it. The one time that television tried it, it wished it hadn't—a comedy series called The Hero several seasons back. It was said to have failed because it is hard to root for Beautiful People driving diamond-wheeled automobiles.

Still, Self persisted. People were able to identify, he said, if it was done right. And Self intended that it should be done right. He hired the husband-wife team of Irving Ravetch and Harriet Frank, screenwriters who had never before soiled their typewriters with television (and, according to Ravetch, "never will again"). They wrote a "brilliant" pilot script. Those who remember it (Ravetch claims he can't) say that its hero resembled Rod Taylor less than he did Irving Thalberg, the Wunderkind of the Louis B. Mayer era who had been dead for over 30 years. "It was all about the power structure," Self says. "A kind of Hollywood 'Executive Suite.' CBS said it might be interested, with some alterations."

When the Ravetches huffily declined to make them, the project lay dormant for a while. Then one day in 1965 Self happened to mention Bracken to George Cukor. "You ought to talk to Spencer Tracy about that," the veteran movie director ventured. "At least he won't throw you out."

Tracy "rather liked" the notion and suddenly NBC got interested. It meant, of course, a complete face-lifting of the script. For this important task Self tapped James Poe, an Oscar winner for "Around the World in 80 Days." Tracy was to appear sparingly ("You'll be → the star but not the lead," Self told him). "Bracken" (never cast) would carry the main burden as the aging tycoon's protege, a relationship not too dissimilar to that of the real-life Fox board chairman, Darryl F. Zanuck, and his son, Richard, the vice president in charge of production. A third important character would be "a woman star with problems."

Tracy liked the Poe script fine, he said, but was committed to do "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" for Stanley Kramer first. Before the pilot could be shot, Tracy was dead.

A less tenacious man might have let the matter rest there. Not Self. He buttonholed JP Miller, author of "Days of Wine and Roses." Miller took the assignment because, he says, "I hoped to be truthful, to deal with the realities rather than the puffed-up lies and self-flagellation of the Hollywood confessions. My hero [Bracken] was a young, dynamic, unhaloed iconoclast who liked to fly off to location in his private jet and wasn't afraid to concern himself with politics and other real things that make the world go round. It [the story] was blunt and realistic, about cynical, right people trying to make good movies. Too blunt for the network. I took my money and ran."

Early last year Self decided to try again. This time he put a pragmatist in charge. He was producer Stanley Rubin, a Phi Beta Kappa and veteran of TV and movie wars whose latest film was "The President's Analyst." If the Monash-Ravetch-Poe-Miller versions had attempted to be the Rolls-Royce of backstage stories, Rubin's was the slightly used Cadillac—but, as used-car salesmen are fond of saying, loaded with extras. Rubin was assisted by Dorothy Kingsley, veteran MGM writer who had recently been on the script of "Valley of the Dolls." The Kingsley version (later reworked and "modernized" by John Wilder and Michael → for noses of all ages... Neo-Synephrine brings quick free-breathing relief from cold's congestion. Swollen nasal passages shrink almost on contact. Mucus drains. Suddenly, you have more breathing room.

Prompt use of Neo-Synephrine helps prevent troublesome sinus infections, including the earache children can get with a cold. In fact, more doctors recommend Neo-Synephrine by name than any other decongestant brand you can buy.

Available as spray or drops in strengths for every member of the family: infants, 1/8%; children, 1/4%; adults, 1/2% and 1%.

Gleason) again demoted Bracken to a ghostly presence—talked about, occasionally heard but seldom seen, except for an occasional glimpse of the back of his neck. A great believer in the power of archetypes, Rubin salted the show with them. There is a "young Marilyn Monroe" (played by Karen Jensen), a young Marlon Brando (Stephen Oliver), a young Grace Kelly (Laraine Stephens), a shy Jeanne Crain-type (Linda Harrison), a stuntman (Dennis Cole), a talent-school boss (Elizabeth Allen), a ferocious stage mother (Jeanne Cooper)—11 regulars—enough to start a repertory company or a football team. At more or less dead center of this maelstrom he placed the veteran Eleanor Parker, who plays Bracken's executive secretary, a studio political power. With that kind of scattershot it would be pretty hard not to hit something.

Just to make sure, however, Rubin dangled other inducements. He arranged it so that real-life stars—anyone who happens to be working on the lot—would wander through his stories like dress extras who have lost their way to the pay window. He adopted an extensive guest-star policy to lend extra rating muscle. He planned to let audiences in on the razzle-dazzle of special effects, top-secret stuff once zealously guarded: what a set looks like, how a stunt is performed, how rain is made, how dialogue is dubbed, how sea battles are staged in miniature, etc.

"That's our gimmick," says Rubin. "It is the equivalent of Mission: Impossible's self-destruct. We think viewers will be fascinated."

Indeed, Rubin touched so many bases that it led to some confusion on the base paths. Instead of the relatively simple three- or four-character story premise originally conceived by Self, Rubin found himself with a top-heavy anthology, its components strait-jacketed into place by gimmicks, guest stars, and 11 characters who had to be kept busy by the scriptwriters. He had contracts with his regulars calling for them to appear in a minimum number of segments (Miss Parker must appear in all 13 at $5000 a week). His talent, with obvious exceptions, was untested, and he had no reliable crowd-pleaser of the caliber of, say, Sebastian Cabot to take up the slack.

As a result, Miss Parker, an old-time movie queen unused to the expediciencies of TV, quickly became disenchanted. At premiere time she notified the network that she was "terminating" her contract after the first 16 segments. She wished the show a lot of luck, but, she said sadly, she had been reduced to the status of "bit player." Close associates were more blunt. "She was had," said one. Rubin played it cool. "Bracken's World is deliberately designed not to depend on any one star," he declared.

Finding stories to fit these diverse elements had its nightmarish aspects. None of the usual crutches worked. "Scripts are tough," explains executive story editor Del Reisman, late of Peyton Place. "It's not as if you had a life-and-death situation going for you, as in a Western or medical show."

"We have to bend our stories a bit," adds Rubin.

The wonder is that Bracken's World is not "bent" beyond all hope. Although off to a slow start in the ratings, it is still thought to have a good chance to beat "the system." As one observer puts it: "Bracken's World has at least one thing going for it. It is not about a widow with three adorable, gap-toothed children. There are no animals or Dutch uncles. Its cops are studio cops, and its cowboys, if any, are the Schwab's drugstore variety. In TV that makes it the most revolutionary happening since 'Hair.'"

But no one was betting his hair shirt on it, not even Self, who equates success in TV, he says, with "a crapshoot." Only one thing was certain. Bracken's World was on the air. END

TV Teletype: New York

NEIL HICKEY REPORTS:

GEORGE SCHAEFER, whose 20-year television career has netted him the Directors Guild of America Award four times, plus numerous Emmys, Peabodys and other awards, will be honored by the New York Cultural Center with a precedent-setting retrospective of his work, running from Nov. 18 through Nov. 23. Among the presentations will be "The File on Devlin" (which will be broadcast Nov. 21 on NBC). Its stars, DAVID MCCALLUM and Dame JUDITH ANDERSON, will fly to New York to be present. Other selections will be made from the total of 67 television dramas (most of them for Hallmark Hall of Fame) which Schaefer has produced and/or directed.

The New York Philharmonic Young People's Concerts, recently renewed by CBS for the '69-70 season, has composer AARON COPLAND as narrator-conductor for its season premiere on Dec. 28. Copland will write his own script, and plans to discuss and conduct four of his movie scores. Incidentally, his "Appalachian Spring" served as theme for CBS Reports and he is also the composer of the CBS Playhouse theme . . . DIANA RIGG, who won male hearts in her Emma Peel jumpsuits (The Avengers), and critical acclaim as a Shakespearean actress, has opted for adventure again with a starring role in the forthcoming James Bond flick "On Her Majesty's Secret Service." In the film, she and Bond (played by GEORGE LAZENBY) will say "I do."

JOE NAMATH, aching knees and all, will do a special for NBC . . . Attention Cleveland Amory: ABC's The American Sportsman, which returns for its season premiere on Jan. 25, will film several African segments: CLIFF ROBERTSON hunts lions in Zambia; TED WILLIAMS goes after sable antelope; Colorado's Gov. JOHN LOVE trails kudu; and ex-Dallas Cowboy DON MEREDITH stalks Cape buffalo.

TWIGGY, who we hear is taking shape, has promised to visit MERV GRIFFIN soon, and rarely seen playwright ARTHUR MILLER is also on his guest list . . . NBC managed to fly film expert PIERRE D. GAISSEAU into virginal New Guinea territory, where he's making a film for Experiment in Television--but they're a little worried about getting him out. The area is inhabited by very primitive Indonesians, and they may not be friendly . . . A crew from ABC's Directions went to Spain to film a show on the famous painter EL GRECO in Toledo.

JANE WHITE, who plays Nurse Holliday on CBS's The Edge of Night, is the daughter of the late civil-rights leader WALTER WHITE, who was executive secretary of the NAACP for 39 years . . . ENGELBERT HUMPERDINCK's Dec. 2 special on ABC will be taped in London. His guests, TOM JONES, DIONNE WARWICK, BARBARA EDEN and JOSE FELICIANO, are hoping the garbage strike there will be over before they arrive to do the show . . . The Nov. 23 entry of NBC's Wild Kingdom, the second of a two-parter on forest fires, focuses on animal-rescue attempts.

THE BILL COSBY SHOW

REVIEW

by Cleveland Amory

Casual is the word for Cosby. He acts as if he weren't acting, as if he were just a friend of yours. The camera just happened to be photographing. And his whole show is written as if it weren't written at all, but actually did happen. At its best, it works beautifully—a kind of vignette which is not only a real slice of life, and the way life really is, but also a welcome relief from all the carefully carpentered half hours which have just about as much relation to reality as their ridiculous laugh tracks do to what's funny.

On the other hand, once in a while it doesn't quite come off—and, unfortunately, one of these was the episode the producers picked for their first. In this, you'll recall, physical-education instructor Chet Kincaid (Mr. Cosby) is out jogging and answers a public phone and, trying to be helpful, gets himself involved with everything from a domestic squabble to the police.

The second episode was better—Kincaid needed a night's sleep and was kept awake by a noisy dog—but it was still on the thin side. By the third episode, however, the show began demonstrating—still in its individual, understated, off-hand way—its real potential. Here Kincaid, faced with getting his basketball team ready for its first game, is accused of prejudice against 5-foot-1 Joey (Gregory Gordon). "I'm not prejudiced," he protests to counselor Marsha Patterson (Joyce Bulifant), "some of my best friends are short." "You pre-judge," she answers, "and that's prejudice." "I have nothing against little people," he persists. "Yet," she pursues, "the only way you could describe him a few minutes ago was that he was a little guy."

This episode was not only full of meaning—Mr. Cosby gets a message across but doesn't hit you over the head with it—but was also full of wonderful little touches. "See you here tomorrow at 3:30," he tells his team. "And no smoking or drinking or carrying on like grown-ups." It also demonstrated Mr. Cosby's amazing versatility—from tossing in baskets to throwing away lines that most comedians would dine out on. The fourth episode, too, was full of these touches—and particularly touching ones too, since in this episode, entitled "A Girl Called Punkin," Kincaid was faced with the problem of a withdrawn girl child (Arlyce Baker) coming over to his bachelor quarters, unannounced, to spend the night with him.

By the fifth episode, we were won over for good. In this, Kincaid and the hefty Miss Fiske (Alice Nunn) undertook to chaperone the school dance. From start to finish it was a small riot. It started with Kincaid Indian-wrestling with Miss Fiske, went on to looking in a boy's mouth for the boy's lost bite plate—with Kincaid making bite faces too—then on to Kincaid having to pick up his date in a garbage truck, and finally ending with Kincaid sedately fox-trotting with his date surrounded by a swirling, swinging, twisting mass of teen-agers. All in all, we give this show a B-plus for originality and a straight A for effortlessness.
